Abstract

The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 6-week training program on the physical fitness and health-related quality of life (HRQL) of sedentary middle-aged women. The subjects were randomly assigned to either a control group or an exercise group. The exercise group performed a supervised aerobic and resistance training program three times per week. The control group did not participate in any structured exercise program. Physical fitness was assessed by a series of tests including a maximal oxygen consumption test, a 6-minute walk test, and a sit-to-stand test. HRQL was assessed using the SF-36 questionnaire. The results showed that the exercise group had significantly higher levels of physical fitness and HRQL compared to the control group at the end of the 6-week program.

Keywords: exercise, physical fitness, HRQL, middle-aged women.
